History

- 1948 Shelley v. Kraemer
- 1968 Fair Housing Act

Purpose of Restrictive Covenant Modification (RCM)

Restrictive Covenant Modification allows redacting blatant racial, religious, or other restrictive covenants from real property documents if such language violates fair housing laws.

RESTRICTIVE COVENANT MODIFICATION
(Unlawful Restrictive Language Covenant, Racial or Otherwise)

County of Monterey Assessor-County Clerk-Recorder

Restrictive Covenant Modification (RCM)

1. Government Code section 12956.2 now allows any person to submit an RCM document to the Recorder for review.
2. Government Code section 12956.1 now requires the unlawfully restrictive language to be redacted and blacked out so it is not visible.

atmosphere.”⁵⁰ More generally on the Monterey Peninsula, title company records consistently show evidence of deed restrictions through 1964 that excluded everyone considered nonwhite. Under the heading “Covenants and Conditions,” for example, the Del Monte Properties company routinely included the following clause, “Said premises shall not, nor shall any part thereof, or any improvements thereon at any time be occupied or used by Asiatics, Negroes, or any person born in the Turkish Empire, nor any lineal descendant of such person, except that persons of said races may be employed as household servants.”⁵¹ This boilerplate restriction by race in real estate deeds excluded Jews and Asians (including Filipinos) as well as African Americans by race from all of Pebble Beach and Carmel, most of Monterey, and some parts of Pacific Grove, as well as in specific neighborhoods in Seaside. For example, Bessie Kramer, a white woman described Ord Terrace,

RESTRICTIVE COVENANTS
1940, African Americans, Latinos, Asian Americans

- Deed Covenants allowing racially specific restrictions on property, a practice that created a disparity in access to housing, and formed racially restricted segregated neighborhoods.
- Several newspaper advertisements for housing during the 1940’s list the pictured clause from the Del Monte Properties company.
- In the background image, a December 6, 1947 Ad found in the Salinas Californian listing racial restrictions for new homes in the Mission Park neighborhood
- Listings are reflective of restrictive covenants being a common and acceptable practice on the central coast during this time period.

Marin County Restrictive Covenant Project

Overview

Start Slideshow

The Restrictive Covenant Project aims to inform and educate Marin County residents of the history and significance of government policies and programs that were intentionally discriminatory and helped create segregated communities in Marin. The use of racially restrictive covenants prohibited the purchase, lease, or occupation of a piece of property to a particular group of people, primarily Black and African Americans. And while those covenants are illegal today, many continue to remain in property deeds throughout Marin.

Through the collaboration of the Community Development Agency, the County's Office of Equity and the Assessor-Recorder's Office, residents of Marin are able to certify and affirm that illegal and racially restrictive covenants are unconstitutional and violate current laws and County values. Residents, former residents, and families who currently or formerly lived in Marin are encouraged to share personal stories about their lived experiences beginning with the Marinship years, to help create a narrative history of our County.

Marin County Restrictive Covenant Project

INTRODUCTION

Welcome to Marin County's resource and learning page focused on restrictive covenants, discriminatory housing policies and laws that shaped the make-up of Marin County. The mission of the Marin County Restrictive Covenant Project is to share information to help the Marin County community connect, learn and affirm that discriminatory housing practices are not consistent with Marin County values. This page includes information and perspectives gathered from local and national sources about unfair housing practices and the impact at the local level in Marin County. The information on this page and the associated links are not comprehensive; though, we do expect the resources accessible through this page to grow. The current resources are listed by medium and date.
