Comprehensive Overview of Types of Special Districts

Special districts give voters and communities the ability to buy just the amount of government they want, while focusing on local and regional needs. Large or small, they are sensitive and responsive to the neighborhoods and regions they serve. Comprehensive Overview of Types of Special Districts, created by the California Special Districts Association, is a reference guide to the laws that govern special districts. It is intended to serve as a resource for special district board members, staff and the general public to quickly locate the governance powers and functions that distinguish each type of district, as specified within the myriad codes that provide for special districts under California law.

This guide outlines the enabling acts that provide statutory authorization for the formation and operation of the 2,162 independent and mixed board special districts established by the voters of California. Not every district provides all the powers and functions authorized by its enabling act. Those powers and functions that a district does not provide, but which are authorized by its enabling act, are called latent powers. Special districts must get approval from their Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCo) before providing a latent power.

The number of special districts in California is often misquoted due to the number of entities included in the State Controller's annual financial report. While the Controller's 2009-2010 report lists 4,792 "special districts," many are actually non-profit corporations or components of other governments, such as cities and counties.

"Independent special district" as defined by Government Code §56044, "includes any special district having a legislative body all of whose members are elected by registered voters or landowners within the district, or whose members are appointed to fixed terms." In addition to the principle acts of all independent special districts listed in this guide, Appendix A lists the special acts that provide statutory authorization for 141 dependent and independent districts created for specific purposes separate from the standard special district principle acts. Furthermore, Appendix B outlines special districts that may not meet the statutory definition of an independent special district, but whose legislative bodies operate independently given their board's composition of representatives from two or more public agencies. Therefore, these 42 "mixed board" special districts along with 42 of the special act districts in Appendix A and the 2,078 independent districts within the following principle acts comprise CSDA's count of 2,162 special districts.

Ultimately, it is not the number of special districts that is paramount, but the ability to deliver core local services effectively and responsibly. The variety of special district types and unique attributes of each individual district facilitate focused service, which is the strength of special districts and what makes them so special.

NOTE: The entries within Comprehensive Overview of Types of Special Districts are excerpts from California law. The quantities of districts listed are extracted from the 2009-2010 Special Districts Annual Report produced by the State Controller's office.
